

Project Niggle: Final Leaf

At this point in the project, you'll have received your original leaves back, and will have heard something of what those who received your group's collected leaves thought about them. Did that response alter the way you thought about your own leaves? And how about your having read theirs; did you sense new connections? On a single leaf, the group's response to these questions should be written; it can be very free-form, as long or short as is wanted; each person can write a portion of it, or a designated group member can write for the whole. Place this leaf along with your own group's leaves in a simple folder or envelope, and bring them to Friday's class.
