

The Department of Music, Theatre, and Dance at Rhode Island College has an opening for a Graduate Assistantship in Music Education for the 2019-2020 academic year.

Duties Include:

Assist the music faculty with classroom teaching, area logistics, and performance duties as assigned.

Qualifications:

Admission to either the Master of Music Education (MMEd) or the Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT-Music Education) program at Rhode Island College. The successful candidate will be an effective teacher and motivator of college students with varying levels of experience. The Graduate Assistant should be able to teach effectively, perform in a variety of styles, and have great organizational skills.

Application Process:

Email the Graduate Coordinator in Music at rfranzblau@ric.edu for details on the Graduate Assistantship application process and for advising on the appropriate degree program. Descriptions of the MMEd and MAT-Music Education programs can be found at http://www.ric.edu/mtd/musicProgram_mmed.php and http://www.ric.edu/mtd/musicProgram_mat.php.

Music Education at Rhode Island College:

Recognized by Online College Database as the #4 school in the nation for teacher preparation (<http://www.onlinecollegesdatabase.org/top-colleges-and-universities-for-teaching>), Rhode Island College enjoys a distinguished history of preparing teachers for service. The graduate and undergraduate Music Education programs are academically rigorous, noted for their balance of research-based theory and site-based practice. Graduate students receive highly individualized instruction from faculty.
