There is a big park in New York

City. The park has its own zoo.

Families go to visit the animals that live in the zoo. The animals in the zoo make their own families.

There are penguin families.

Sometimes the right girl penguin and the right boy penguin become a couple. Two penguins in the zoo were a little different

The penguins were named Roy and Silo.

Adapted from the original text, And Tango Makes Three, by Justin Richardson and Peter Parnell

Roy and Silo were both boys.

They did everything together.

They loved each other. Roy and

Roy and Silo wanted an egg with a baby penguin. Roy and Silo found a rock that looked like an egg. Roy and Silo Sat on the rock to make it hatch. Roy and Silo sat on the rock but nothing happened.

The baby penguin was named Tango. Tango was the first penguin in the zoo to have two dads. Roy and Silo taught Tango how to swim and sing. All of the children came to the zoo to see Tango and her two dads. At night Roy, Silo and Tango snuggled together and went to sleep as a family.
